Commodore 64C

The complete computer for home, school and small business. Supported by high-quality peripherals and over 10,000 software programs. Full typewriter-style keyboard, 64K RAM, eight sprites, three voices. Bundled with Q-Link telecommunications software.

Commodore 1541-II 5.25" Disk Drive

With its own microprocessor, RAM, ROM and operating system software, the 1541-II provides fast throughput and large memory capacity for your Commodore 64C system. Soon to be bundled with GEOS™ software, which creates an easy-to-use operating environment.

Commodore 1802 Monitor

A high-resolution Color Monitor that maximizes the video capabilities of the Commodore 64C. Built-in speaker and audio amplifier; 40-column color mode and green-screen monochrome mode. Fully compatible with VCR's and television tuners.

Commodore 128D Computer

Includes a full 128 keyboard and a built-in 5.25" disk drive (1571 compatible.)

128D has 128K of user memory expandable to 640K.

The three modes of operation present in the C128 are also present here:

- Commodore 64
- Commodore 128
- CP/M Plus Version 3.0

The 128D features a 14-key numeric keyboard, 16 colors, built in BASIC 7.0, advanced sound capabilities and 40- and 80-column output (80-column display if used with RGBI or monochrome monitor.)

Peripherals

Commodore 1351 Mouse

Point and click the mouse to create pictures or quickly edit documents on your Commodore 64 or Commodore 128 computer. Two modes of operation: In "joystick" mode, the mouse can be used with all software requiring a joystick. In "mouse" mode, the mouse lets you take advantage of newer software such as GEOS.

Commodore 1084S Monitor Analog RGB and Digital

RGBI/high-resolution color monitor for both 40- and 80-column color applications. Built-in stereo amplifier and speaker; headphone jack. Compatible with VCR's and television tuners as well as all Commodore and Amiga computers.

1764 RAM Expansion Module

Expands the Commodore 64's memory to 320K, allowing use of larger programs and faster access to data. Data transfer rate of up to one megabyte per second. Comes with a Deluxe Commodore power supply, a GEOS patch program, RAMDISK DOS, and sample programs.

1750 RAM Expansion Module

Expands the memory of the Commodore 128 to 640K, and supports both Commodore 128 and CP/M modes. Data transfer rate up to 1 megabyte per second.

Commodore 1581 3.5" Disk Drive

A one-megabyte drive for the Commodore 64 and Commodore 128. Supports both standard and fast Commodore serial bus protocols (including "burst" commands) to maximize data transfer speeds. Storage capacity of 808K.

Dual serial ports for daisy chaining more peripherals. Built-in 6502 microprocessor, 8K RAM and 32K ROM. Larger internal RAM yield increased performance.

1660 Modem/300 and 1670 Modem/1200

The 1660 direct-connect modem features 300-baud data transfer rate, auto answer, auto dial with audio feedback.

The 1670, also direct-connect, features 1200-baud data transfer, auto answer, auto dial with audio feedback, as well as auto baud, auto speed and auto mode selections. Uses the popular "AT" HAYES™ command protocol.
